

Welcome!

The Selway River begins its journey high in the Bitterroot Mountains near the Idaho-Montana border. Heading north into the rugged Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness Area, the river travels through isolated and primitive country before its confluence with the Lochsa River near Lowell. Our trips cover 47 miles between Paradise Guard Station and Selway Falls in the heart of the Wilderness Area, offering a wilderness river experience with few equals.

The Selway is a steep, free-flowing river in a geographically compact drainage basin and has a wide range of flows. Rapids vary from long, technical rock gardens to large, crashing wave trains. The nine mile stretch of nearly continuous rapids below the confluence with Moose Creek earns the river its deserved reputation as one of the best whitewater runs in the United States. Between rapids, the river flows through quiet pools and stretches of crystal clear water over a mosaic of colorful rocks.

Whitewater, however, is only one of the many appealing features of the trip. We will have time to hike, fish, swim, and enjoy the many fascinating natural elements of the canyon. The Selway was one of the original rivers to be protected in the National Wild and Scenic Rivers System, and the Forest Service manages it in a highly primitive condition. Only one group, with a maximum of 16 people, is allowed to launch each day. Few people are able to float this wild and primitive stretch of river, and we come away from each trip with a new appreciation for this wonderful remnant of primitive America.

Meeting Time and Place:

All trip members will meet at 8:00 pm the evening before the trip begins at the Stagecoach Inn (208/756-4251) in Salmon, Idaho. The Stagecoach is located on Highway 93 at the north end of town, just across the bridge over the Salmon River. At the pre-trip meeting the trip leader will distribute waterproof dunnage bags, give trip and shuttle information and answer any last-minute questions.

Transportation:

Selway trips begin in Salmon and end in Kamiah. A separate Transportation insert detailing the various travel options should be included with this packet. Please call our office if you do not have one.

Accommodations:

Lodging in Salmon before the trip is good at the Stagecoach Inn (208/756-4251). Accommodations after the trip will depend on your travel plans; guests with the Transportation Package should plan on spending the night after the trip in McCall. You will be flown from Kamiah to McCall the afternoon you get off the river, then on to Boise in time to catch morning flights. In McCall we suggest the Hotel McCall, (208/634-8105) or the Western Mountain Lodge (208/634-6300). If you are driving and wish to stay near the Selway, your best option is the Three Rivers Motel in Lowell (208/926-

Types of boats:

On the Selway we offer two types of boats in which to ride:

Oar rafts are 18 feet long, carry all of the overnight gear and up to 3 guests. They are rowed by a guide using oars attached to a metal frame. Guests ride in the front, hang on through the rapids and relax in the calm stretches.

Paddle rafts are 14 feet long and carry 6 paddlers who actively paddle through the rapids and down the river. Everyone has a paddle, sits on the outer tube of the raft and follows the commands of the paddle guide who sits in the rear.

Equipment List:

A separate Equipment List and Packing Guide should be included with your reservation information. Please call our office if you do not have one.

Itinerary:

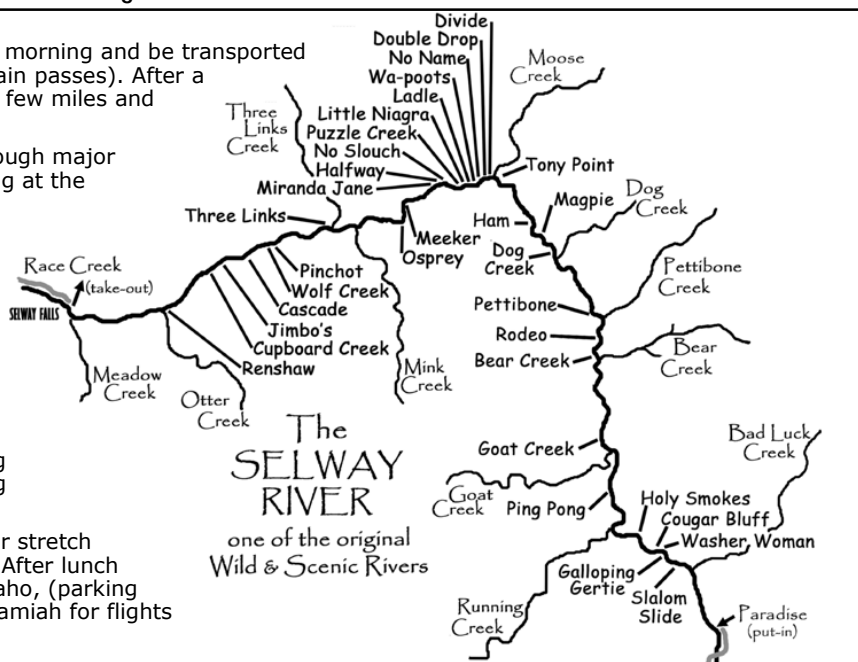

Day 1: We will meet at the Stagecoach Inn early in the morning and be transported to the launch site at Paradise, (4-5 hours over 2 mountain passes). After a safety briefing, we will launch around noon and travel a few miles and run several rapids before arriving at our first camp.

Day 2: A full day carries us 10-12 miles downriver through major rapids at Goat Creek, Pettibone, and Ham before arriving at the beautiful campsite opposite Moose Creek.

Day 3: The third day of the trip is usually a "layover day" which is spent off the river enjoying the Selway's many other attractions. You can take a strenuous hike to a fire lookout, hike along the river to scout the following day's rapids, stroll up scenic Moose Creek, fish, relax in camp, or any combination of these.

Day 4: Below Moose Creek, the Selway earns its reputation as one of the premier whitewater rivers in the world. We will run over 14 major rapids, including Double Drop, Ladle, Little Niagra and Wolf Creek, during this intense, 12 mile day.

Day 5: On the last day of the trip we will float a shorter stretch to our take-out at Race Creek, just above Selway Falls. After lunch at take-out, we will be transported by van to Lowell, Idaho, (parking area for private car shuttles), and on to the airport in Kamiah for flights to Boise, (via McCall) or back to Salmon.

Weather:

The weather in the mountains of Idaho is difficult to predict; we have encountered heatwaves in June and hailstorms in July, so please read the equipment list and come well prepared for a variety of conditions. Summer high temperatures in Idaho's Selway-Bitterroot mountains usually range between 75 and 90 degrees, cooling off to the 40's and 50's at night. June trips can be 10 degrees cooler. Rain, usually in the form of mountain thundershowers, can be expected at any time, and good rain protection is essential. The water temperature is a chilly 45 to 55 degrees.

Camping:

During the course of the trip, everyone is encouraged to participate as much as they desire, whether that be on the river, collecting firewood, or helping out in the kitchen. We have found that the more involved you become with your trip, the more rewarding your trip becomes for you. Camping will be at riverside beaches or flat benches above the river. All sites afford spectacular views of the river and canyon. Some campsites have Forest Service pit toilets; at others ARTA will set up portable toilets. There is usually a central kitchen and campfire area and trip members pick out spots in the surrounding area to pitch their tents or lay out their sleeping bags.

Meals:

ARTA meals are well-balanced and consist of quality foods with fresh meats, fruits, and vegetables. Guides double as camp chefs and the menu includes a wide variety of dishes. Lunches consist of hand-foods and are served picnic-style at riverside stops. Dinners and breakfasts are cooked over an open fire and often include tasty Dutch Oven baked treats. If you have special dietary requirements or are celebrating a special event during the trip, please let us know in advance.

Drinks:

ARTA serves water and fruit drinks (lemonade, orange juice, punch, etc) at meals. If you would like soda, beer, wine, or liquor with your dinner, please bring your own in unbreakable containers (beer and soda in cans, wine and liquor in plastic bottles). Due to weight and space restrictions, we ask that you limit the amount of canned drinks to a moderate amount.

Local Attractions:

Within a day's drive of Salmon are Glacier, Yellowstone, and Grand Teton National Parks, and Sun Valley resort, as well as the Gallitin, Madison and Yellowstone rivers and some great fly-fishing.

Fishing:

Fishing for cutthroat and rainbow trout is excellent in the Selway. The fishing is usually best in July, after the high water period. A light-weight fly or spinning outfit works best, and all rods should be protected in a sturdy case. Effective flies include Caddis, Grasshoppers and Stimulators and small trout spinners work well. The Selway is a catch and release river so only single, barbless hooks are permitted, and fish caught in the river and tributaries must be released back into the river. An Idaho fishing license is required and can be purchased in Salmon at Silver Spur Sports (208/756-2833, closed Sundays).

Suggested Reading:

We will have a communal library on the trip. For pre-trip reading, Idaho Loners, by Cort Conley tells some great stories about Idaho's odd hermits and isolationists, including the tale of William Moreland, the Riderunner of the Selway. And Lewis and Clark's Corps of Discovery passed through this part of Idaho, so Undaunted Courage (Ambrose) and The Way to the Western Sea (Lavender) are also enjoyable to read before or during the trip.
